

Biography of JIAGBOGU OKEOMA CHINELO

Jiagbogu Okeoma Chinelo started her long journey into building a career in Librarianship when she gained employment into the Anambra State Public Library, Nigeria as a Library Assistant. She subsequently got an admission into the institution of higher learning to study Library and Information Science. She obtained her first degree in Library and Information Science from Nnamdi Azikiwe University Awka, Anambra State in 2004. After the mandatory National Youth Service in her home country, she proceeded to the University of Ibadan, Nigeria for her second degree- Masters of Library and Information Studies (MLIS). Having continued her service with the Board, Miss Jiagbogu is currently the head of e-Library Unit of the Prof Kenneth Dike State Central e- Library, Awka. She is presently studying for her PhD in the same field. She has presented papers in various aspects of Library practices at conferences of different levels and therefore has at least ten (10) conference papers to her credit. She has also published papers at peer reviewed journals with others still in print. She is passionate about the application of new technologies in library and information services and this had motivated some of her writings including this paper.