

Biography of Gaby Haddow

Dr Gaby Haddow is a Senior Lecturer with the Department of Information Studies at Curtin University. Gaby coordinates the Department's postgraduate course and is the Director of Research and Creative Production for the School of Media, Culture and Creative Arts, as well as teaching in the areas of research methods and information literacy. She is a co-editor of Australian Academic & Research Libraries and a member of the editorial boards for the Australian Library Journal and Library and Information Research. Gaby chaired the Australian Library & Information Association's Research Committee between 2011 – 2013, and for three years wrote evidence summaries for the journal Evidence Based Library & Information Practice. She has published widely in national and international journals, and recently contributed a chapter on bibliometrics to Research methods: Information, systems and contexts. Gaby has collaborated with practitioners on several projects, including a quantitative study of library use and student retention published in Library & Information Science Research, and the knowledge and skills required of information professionals – an international collaboration with thirteen partners. Her main research interests are in scholarly communication, research assessment, bibliometric measures of research activity, and the communication of research to practice. Gaby is currently involved in projects investigating the information literacy behaviour of information studies students, research classification for assessment purposes, and international collaboration by social science and humanities researchers.
